FRENCH RADICALS control the government, having got rid of Tardieu, semi-conservative. France makes that runs about 300,000 idle, what would she do if eight millions were out of work?

In Manchuria, Japan's forces, crowded by hordes of poorly organized Chinese, are pressing close to Russia's border and the Soviet government is gravely anxious.

At Nagasaki, Japan, the United States consulate was bombed just before noon yesterday, supposedly from a passing automobile. The fire was put out, nobody hurt. That doesn't make this government "gravely anxious," but it should remind us to keep our defense apparatus in good order and to let ourselves up in any World Court.

Many people in this world are there while, although they rarely appear in print on newspapers' front pages. Mrs. E. O. Kane of New York lost her pocketbook containing $15.53, borrowed to pay her rent. A new woman, conductor of a Fifth ave. omnibus, found the purse on the floor of his omnibus and returned it to the loser. She sent him $3 "for his honesty" writing, "as you could see by the papers in my bag I had not paid my rent for three months. I wish I could send you three times as much, but I have been out of work for seven months and I have a boy to support. I could not sleep when I lost the money." Matthew Horan returned the $3 with, "Your thanks are sufficient reward."

Merchants, newspapers and the public are interested in proof of the fact that it pays to advertise energetically when you offer what the people want. This was demonstrated in Boston last week by Houghton & Dutton, one of the two apartment stores in America, advertising a "Greater Houghton Day" sale for last Saturday.

Anthony W. Ackerman, general manager, published on Friday a 12-page advertising section in the Boston Evening Globe, which dominated circulation in the Boston evening field. Mr. Ackerman knows that it does not pay to whisper, if you are going to shout, and the effect for the day was substantially above $300,000, compared with a sale of $250,000 for the same event a year ago.

Advertising pays, if you know how, have the goods and use the right medium.

The patient American people are actually tired of being robbed through taxation.

A Wall Street man yesterday remarked: "You would be surprised to know how many of my friends have taken the trouble to look up the national debt, so they could write about taxes."

A New Jersey farmer said: "We are tired of seeing signs on our station telling of increased taxes. We are tired of buying taxes, instead of boys. Tax, and we are not going to stand it."

A New York city real estate owner says that there ought to be an end to robbery and taxation.

In New York you can take your choice of properties offered for sale at about half the city's assessed valuation.

In Brooklyn, yesterday, the four-year-old son of Dr. Otto Runge was kidnapped, the doctor's car stolen with his child.

Interviewing Police Commissioner Mulrooney of New York, in the June number of Cosmopolitan Magazine, Danus Mulrooney shows that kidnappings may be expected to increase.

He said that the time has come when law enforcement agencies are being called upon to take the place of Al Capone. Another Capone will arise, in the West Side. The five returned to the Bronx Hotel with a million gun, and Mulrooney led over the police car and the restaurant where the detectives were waiting. The policeman dropped to the floor and said: "I'm a man."

No one would speak lightly of prohibition, based on a mere threat to beat the human race and "put an end to crime," but it certainly has made life more exciting, than it used to be. Thanks to the bootleg industry, (Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

A reign of terror spread from Hyde Park to West Roxbury today as heavily-armed police guards were extended to cover three houses during the search for Carl Liden, 55, who escaped from Worcester State Hospital. While officers watched the home of Mrs. Andrew Zachrisson, shot two years ago by Liden, a relative, appeals for police protection were received from her son, Carroll, and son-in-law, Ralph Colon, both living in Hamilton st., West Roxbury.

Officers were immediately dispatched to guard the homes of Carroll and Zachrisson at 15 Hamilton st., where he lives with his wife and two-year-old baby, and of Colon at 40 Hamilton st.

PREVIOUS SHOOTINGS
Colon, a former track star of East Boston High school, Mercersburg Academy, and Penn State, was shot for the safety of his young wife and two small children.

He declared that Liden had threatened to slay all his relatives, including Mrs. and Mrs. Zachrisson, their two sons and daughter.

According to Colon, the shooting of Mrs. Zachrisson was not the first time that Liden had attempted to kill her.

On a previous occasion, he said, Liden had fired a shot at Zachrisson, but the bullet had crashed into a mirror in the house. He was arrested and confined for three months, being released as cured.

The young man said the shooting of Mrs. Zachrisson followed with Liden to Worcester.

SAYS MAN IS CUNNING
"I have a wife and two small children," said Colon, "a boy four years old and a girl of two."

Magoon, sentenced to four years for his part in $100,000 mail robbery, and Samuel Arslanian, who will serve five years for concealing bankrupt assets.

Charges of a "milk racket" under the control of Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, head of the State Department of Agriculture, came from Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, head of the Boston Health Department, today on the eve of the third reading of a bill calling for uniform milk inspection in the Commonwealth.

He further charged that Dr. Gilbert is employed by milk producers and dealers and the New England Milk Producers' Association, under a fee system which he claims has brought $100,000 to the agriculture commissioner in the last eight years.

The bill, sponsored by the Department of Agriculture, is designed to remove the authority for the inspection of milk from local boards of health and place the responsibility of public health with the agriculture commissioner.

"The bill comes up for debate tomorrow in the House," he said.

"In making his statement Dr. Mahoney said:

"The bill would create a card in absolute control of the milk industry in the person of the director of the division of dairying and animal husbandry. He is an employee of the Department of Agriculture, under the absolute control of the commissioner of agriculture."

"Dr. Gilbert is also the private employer of the milk dealers and the milk producers of the New England Milk Producers' Association under a fee estimated to have brought him $100,000 in the last eight years."

"As a public officer, Dr. Gilbert would be required to police the very interests he is required as a private employee to protect."

RADICAL LEGISLATION
"Even assuming there were need for such a state activity, which I deny, the bill is manifestly improper to place such an activity in the department of agriculture," claimed Dr. Mahoney, who termed the bill "a matter of the foot of the foot."

In Dr. Mahoney's possession and which he showed to substantiate his charge against Dr. Gilbert are a number of letters bearing the name of Dr. A. W. Gilbert as supervisor of the association.

The bill requests that checks be made by Dr. Mahoney at his office in St. Corvill, which Dr. Mahoney pointed out is the Boston office of the association.

MONTHLY REPORTS.
Another photostatic exhibit offered to Dr. Mahoney is a statement of return by milk distributors to the association, which is to be executed by Dr. Gilbert and returned to him, calling for "a list of the names of the milk producers."

Commenting on this statement, Dr. Mahoney said that Dr. Gilbert was using the authority of his office in his private activities.

The legislation, which has been under fire for some months on the floor of the House, tomorrow will submit a hard debate in which it is promised, further charges will be made.

McTierman ordered the demonstrators to disperse, but they began to parade up and down the street.

ALL BROKER'S RECORDS ARE DESTROYED

Letter From a Fugitive Clerk
Read in Court Saves Kinsman
in Contempt Case

An amazing confession by a broker's clerk to destroying all the books and records of the European Securities Corp. in the furnace of a State street building, where the company had its offices, was placed before Judge Qua in superior court today.

The confession is embodied in a letter written by Lawrence Skou of the Black Bay. Skou was employed by George P. Kinsman, president and treasurer of the corporation, at 92 State st.

Kinsman disappeared last February, returned six weeks later and was arrested for larceny from a customer.

Last Friday Kinsman, Skou and another employee, Gilbert Trunkett of Waban, were before Judge Qua, who told them they would go to jail for contempt of court unless they produced the books.

With Skou's confession, the others are saved from jail.

Skou has disappeared since writing the letter to a friend, according to the police. Officers are seeking him.

Kinsman, free on bail on the larceny complaint, has been rearrested by Inspector George Farrell on the bucket shop charge.

APPEARS IN TANGLE

Skou's letter—revealing for the first time that the missing books were actually destroyed, throwing the affairs of the company and its thousands of customers into a hopeless tangle—was as follows:

"I don't want to see George Kinsman go to jail for something he didn't do and did not know of. I destroyed the books, checks, check stubs and the rest of the records that are missing by burning them in the boiler of the building at 92 State st., on Saturday, February 21, 1932.

"This would come out sooner or later, as the fireman found some of the papers that were not completely burned."

"I did this alone and unassisted and without the knowledge of anyone."

"This took place after supper while Hoot Gibson went out to get his on the Saturday mentioned."

"Things were greatly mixed up and I was badly upset and I thought at the time I might help by doing this."

(Signed)
"LAWRENCE SKOU"

WITH KINSMAN AWAY

The court had demanded the books and records turned over to Benjamin Levy, who has been appointed receiver for the concern.

Kinsman, who lives in Lynn, had gone on a trip and failed to return at the time that Skou destroyed the documents. The books were destroyed on Saturday and the company closed its doors the following Monday. Customers complained to police and the charge against Kinsman resulted.

RICH WANDERER BACK HOME

Washington, May 10 (AP)—An 82-year-old man who in a younger day won enormous fortune and international fame as a big business organizer, was back home today after 21 hours of quiet adventure.

While police of three cities searched, Charles B. Flint, bald-headed, in bedroom slippers and an old coat and trousers, went to Baltimore, spent a night in a 75-cent hotel room, borrowed four cents to make up the price of his fare back to Washington and then was found strolling on 16th st.

He had taken a taxi to go to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for an examination. He would give no explanation of his absence.

Flint has been ranked among the wealthiest men in the country.

Governor Ely in his office in the State House today received the letter from the Suffolk County Grand Jury inviting him to appear and give any information in his possession regarding the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co.

After Clerk Prendible was seen entering and leaving the executive suite, the Governor's secretary, Dewitt C. DeWolfe, was asked by newspapermen to inquire if Governor Ely had any statement to make.

Governor Ely sent out word that when he had anything to give to the newspapers he would let them know.

The motorboat was identified as the property of Albert Benig of Valley Stream, L. I. who said it was stolen from him. A motorboat was supposed to have been heard in the vicinity of the Collings yacht just after the slaying.

BINGHAM BEER BILL OFFERED TO SENATE

Washington, May 10 (AP)—The 4 per cent beer bill was offered in the Senate today by Sen. Bingham of Connecticut, as an amendment to the revenue measure, assuring a rollout on this issue.

Bingham proposed legislation of 4 per cent beer as a substitute for numerous "nuisance" taxes in the tax bill, estimating the revenue from the alcoholic beverage would not be government $275,000,000 annually.

He would substitute the beer tax for the admissions, communications and radio and phonograph taxes, saying the beer provision also would make unnecessary the numerous other taxes on the automobile and in income taxes beyond the rates fixed by the House.

"This not only eliminates the worst of the nuisance taxes," said Bingham, "but will immediately restore work to hundreds of thousands of unemployed and provide a new market for grain, coal, transportation and numerous other articles for which there is now no demand."

Washington, May 10 (AP)—The American minister to Sweden, John M. 'L' BUILDING TO COST $600,000

The proposed new building to house the Boston Elevated offices and the Boston Transit Department, at Charles and Cambridge sts., on the traffic circle island, would "furnish impetus to a large improvement in the district," a statement from the Elevated declared today.

According to the Elevated's plans, the new building, rising 200 feet from the ground to the top of the tower, to be constructed above and to enclose the new Charles station, would add to the attractiveness of the section and would accelerate further construction to follow the widening of Cambridge and Charles sts.

Tentative plans call for a 1600,000 building, 45 feet wide and 160 feet long, with a tower 75 feet high and 30 feet square. There would be seven office floors in the building, with the first usable floor above the station platform 35 feet from the street.

WHAT 'L' DIMES WILL BUILD

Here's the proposed Elevated building to be erected at Charles and Cambridge sts., facing the Charles river at the site of the new Charles station. The structure will cost $600,000 to start and will eventually tower 200 feet above the city.

It will add beauty to the new traffic circle erected there on the banks of the narrowed river. Plans thus far are tentative. But the 75-foot tower will eventually go higher as shown in architect's drawing.

Curdo was arraigned on charges of drunkenness, driving an automobile without permission and driving after his license had been revoked.

He pleaded guilty to the drunkenness charge and was given a suspended sentence to the state farm. Curdo accepted his friend's advice and pleaded nolo on the other charges.

When Judge Avery imposed a fine, Curdo expressed surprise. "I don't see how you can find me guilty," Curdo said. "The police can't prove I was driving." Judge Avery dismissed the complaints, but revoked the suspension of the sentence, and now Curdo is down on the farm.

B. J. DEAN URGES JOB INSURANCE TO SAVE U. S.

Unemployment insurance as "the only permanent cure for unemployment" is the only plan that will save the United States, B. J. Dean, president of the American Association of University Men, declared today in a speech before the 100 members of the Kiwanis Club at the Boston City Club.

Dean, who is president of the American Association of University Men, declared that the only permanent cure for unemployment is the establishment of a system of unemployment insurance. He said that the United States is the only country in the world that has not adopted such a system.

Auto of 1905 Vintage Still Does 40 and Owner Won't Sell

Chicago, May 10 (AP)—These modern automobiles are fine but they built some real cars back in 1905, too.

Peter Esslinger bought one of the 1905 variety for $10 and applied for a state license. It still does 35 to 40 miles an hour.

"When the manufacturers learned that I had bought the machine they offered me a brand new auto for it," Esslinger said. "But I turned down the proposition. I intend to run this car until it falls apart—I do."

A museum offered him $20 for it, but he declined.

OHIO GOVERNOR IN RACE FOR PRESIDENT

By the Associated Press
Gov. George White of Ohio stoves officially into the Democratic party's presidential running today through the primary selection of his State's convention delegates, 45 of the 52 being assured him.

Simultaneously West Virginia Democrats selected 14 delegates confidentially counted for Franklin D. Roosevelt. In both states virtually the entire Republican legislature vote of 55 and 15 respectively, was assigned to President Hoover, although he remained off the preference vote list. A party convention in Tennessee was expected to give him a solid 24.

Governor William H. Murray of Oklahoma sought the preference vote in both states, unopposed in Ohio and in contest with Roosevelt in West Virginia. In neither case

GARNER BOOM IN CHICAGO

Chicago, May 10 (AP)—Headquarters will be opened here this week to promote Speaker John N. Garner's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President.

The headquarters will be in charge of the national committee formed two months ago after the speaker's talents as an administrator and his popularity with the rank and file in and out of his party evoked country-wide attention.

Enthusiasm over his sweeping victory in the California primary last Tuesday, when he won the State's entire delegation of 44, the committee plans to launch an organized effort in his behalf among delegations from other states.

Including the home territory of Gov. Roosevelt, at present leading contender, and Alfred E. Smith, the nominee four years ago, "Garner-for-President" headquarters will be opened in New York.

Why are other cigarettes silent on this vital question?

Do you inhale? Seven out of ten people know they do. The other three inhale without realizing it. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question . . . because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? Remember—more than 20,000 physicians, after Luckies had been furnished them for tests, basing their opinions on their smoking experience, stated that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.

Do you inhale? Of course you do! So be careful. Safeguard your delicate membranes!

May Christie

NEW YORK, MAY 10.—Madame Cobina White is hostess par excellence. She gave one of the nicest parties you could imagine, last Thursday night, in her high-ceilinged, duplex apartment on E. 57th st. . . .

Or perhaps it would be more accurate to state that the versatile Mrs. William May Wright gave over her apartment last Thursday night to Mr. Deems Taylor . . . Mr. Ramsey Brent . . . and Mr. Vladimir Rosing . . . so that they could present to us their scheme of the "Commonwealth Theater Incorporated."

Nearly two hundred friends of Cobina's and of the three gentlemen above mentioned poured into the "apartment," and even hung over the etched Spanish gallery that tops her lovely living room, looking down at some of Mayfair's fairest and most famous, half of whom were sitting in informal fashion on the floor . . .

Arts and Letters in Merry Throng

MARY HOYT WIGBOR was there . . . and Joseph Urban . . . and Miss Ruth Hale . . . and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Seldes . . . and Bettina and Natalie Hall . . . and the Conde Nast.

In between Mrs. May Wright Brown and having several merry giggles on the floor with Madame Cobina, our hostess (she is very amusing) I had a little chat with those nice Waterman girls . . . Alice came out not long ago . . . I've known them for some time . . .

And Mr. and Mrs. Christopher La Farge were at this delightful party.

So were Mr. and Mrs. John De Witt Peitz . . . Mr. and Mrs. Eustice Seligman . . . and the Cleeve Throckmorts.

MARIO BRAGIOTTI performed a duet on piano with a gentleman called Mr. Jacques Fray.

Both these young men are well known to radio audiences. They also have toured with Maurice Chevalier.

Vladimir Rosing and Mr. John Upman sang. It was a mimicry of C. Society and the Stage, whereof I introduced the new scheme of the "Commonwealth Theater Incorporated."

Shakespeare at Chess

MRS. MINETTE HIRST was hostess at a very large and interesting tea last Thursday afternoon, whereat was displayed a most beautiful painting . . .

Prince Lauds Painting

THE SHOWING of this picture was not in any way money, but at a charming gesture to those interested in art.

She imagined there were at least four hundred people at this tea . . . which was given in the quiet, moderate fourth floor of a large Fifth Avenue house.

I chatted during the tea with Prince Georges Matchabelli, who was just in from the painting.

The Prince and Princess Olenyok were there . . . the Countess Landorff . . . and I had a long talk with Mr. Burgenne Hamilton and Mr. Alfonso Fontaine.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

Letter to an Angling Author

Dear Walter: Now that you are out of college and have definitely determined to follow a literary career, you should continue to read the books that will give you a clearer understanding of the literary life.

Such a volume lies on my desk this morning. It is by Arthur Waugh, of whom, perhaps, you have never heard, but I do recall that you told me you had read some of the books of his two sons, Evelyn and Alec Waugh, and liked them. But the father has something mellower and more important to say, and I feel sure you will be interested in every page of this autobiography, which gives a charming picture of life in a past generation.

To you, Arthur Waugh, who says he was born in 1864, will seem an old man; but you will find him young in spirit and heart, still enthusiastic about life and work, and not content merely to sit in a chimney corner and smoke his pipe in peace. He has a rare understanding of the younger generation, and having been born in a gentler time than this, he has retained sentimental feelings and emotions which may seem old-fashioned to you.

But when he wistfully looks back on his long career of journalist and publisher during the Victorian era, he does it so delightfully that you will find under his spell and spell, as I did, that you are literally in a room talking with him.

You will almost feel his hand on your shoulder; and it might have been instead of that English professor at Yale who gave you that advice about not worrying over mathematics if you intended to pursue a career in the world of letters; for you would always be able to add up your banking account.

Now this, he has retained sentimentality and emotions which may seem old-fashioned to you. But when he wistfully looks back on his long career of journalist and publisher during the Victorian era, he does it so delightfully that you will find under his spell and spell, as I did, that you are literally in a room talking with him.

WESTCOTT WORRIES IN FINE WORDS ABOUT US

By GILBERT SELDES

THE MOST INTERESTING THING about Glenway Westcott's new book is that he should have felt the need of writing it. He is still quite a young man, although some ten years have passed since his work began to appear in the Dial. He has had a peculiarly gratifying kind of success, for he won a good prize (Harpers), and won, at the same time, the praise of good critics. He went abroad, sheltered by enough prosperity to let him write as he chose, and not spoiled by too much money; he has lived these pleasantly and done good, serious work, chiefly in fiction. The Grandmothers and Good-Bye Wisconsin kept up the reputation which The Apple of the Eye had won for him. He was at work on another novel, a long one, when he began a motor tour through Germany, and felt himself compelled to write Fear and Trembling, a long book on the peril of war, our economic system, on the depression.

Ideas Asleep

He is still writing as a meditative novelist, in a style so smooth and slumberous that the ideas, of which there are even too many, fail to awaken us, fall even to wake themselves. The book has brilliant perceptions about nationalities; for instance, his remark that good and typical Americans are sociable and few Europeans, except bad Europeans, are; the good Americans therefore meet the bad Europeans on friendly terms, and the results are disastrous for both. There are wise remarks about the way civilized human beings live: "Half our time is wasted considering the impression we make on others, and now we have no time to waste." Westcott's presentation of the status of the artist is keen and sound. And no one disagrees with his desire for universal peace.

Soft Words—No Wrath

Yet an war on Russia and on love and on writers Mr. Westcott writes so well and makes his points so softly that it becomes too difficult to follow him, to know exactly what he is saying. I get no body of thought, no clear principles and no call to action. So for me it is only interesting that a novelist whose passion is the relation between human beings should be compelled in our time to rid himself of general ideas, knowing himself to be a fumbling and ineffectual manipulator of ideas.

Mr. Westcott has succumbed to the American Jitters too brilliantly analyzed by Edmund Wilson, who has had more training in the use of thought. Every writer of fiction has, at times, the illusion that he would be a great statesman, and the good writers manage to throw their political ideas out of the window when they begin writing, or, in their work, manage to work the ideas into their stories. For others the best thing is to collect all the vague generalizations, put them into a separate book and then trust the publisher.

Fiction Dwindles

In connection with novelists who have become economists. I noted once before that no one expects a biologist to give up his life work merely because the world is in a state of chaos; no one thinks that Einstein ought to become a Communist or an anti-Communist; the astrophysicist and the physicist may carry on their work. But the novelist, because humanity is his theme, is looked upon with a little contempt if he does not declare himself. Perhaps the reason is that the novelist themselves have so little respect for their career.

Love of Oddities

Charles Fort, who died a few days ago, was a man enchanted by the accidental, the unexplained, and whatever seemed contrary to natural law. Nothing would have pleased him more than the sight of a stone flying upward through the air of its own motion, or pine wood sinking under the water, or fish living out of it. In a book to be published June 6, Wild Tanta, he says of himself: "I am a collector of notes upon subjects that have diversity—such as divinations from concentricity in the lunar crater Copernicus, and a sudden appearance of purple Englishmen—stationary meteor-radiants, and a reported growth of hair on the bald head of a mummy—and 'Did the girl swallow the catapillars?'"

From the Papers

For such a man the appearance of the morning and evening papers must have been a moment of supreme excitement. He never knew what oddity he might find there, from Wanted, Conn., where all the three-legged roosters live, or Timbuctoo. He read hundreds of newspaper clippings, and in Lot and New Lands, his earlier books, summed up his queer learning.

Relief From Commonplace

It is interesting to learn that Theodore Dreiser was one of his disciples. This master of the ordinary, who fills long books with countless details of lives so like others that they became apocryphal, while life itself—still seemed to have yearned for the unusual and the inexpressible. A Fortin society exists to carry on the good work, and whoever of us begins to be bored with the ordinariness of the heavens and the processes of nature will know where to turn for relief. Unless the scientists, who have already annihilated most of their own lives, go further and abolish them all.

BOMBING OPENS GAMBLER WAR

Chicago, May 10 (AP)—A bomb was tossed in the doorway of a racing news service office on the third floor of the Congress Trust Savings bank building and the police said its blast signalled resumption of a race track gamblers' war ended by three years ago. The explosion jarred the vicinity of Congress st. and Wabash ave. and shook occupants of Michigan Ave. hotels, but two men working in the office of the new service escaped injury. Expecting trouble among the race track gamblers due to alleged efforts of Capone gangster to wedge into control, police arrested James J. Lester, 34, known as "king of the bombers," on charges of vagrancy. A black powder missile was thrown into the Western Suburban Dealers and Dyers Shop and caused $200 damage.

THE SLEUTH

FICTION SLEUTH BECOMES MORE MYSTERIOUS THAN THE THRILLER ITSELF

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

A PUBLISHING FIRM recently announced that it was issuing a first mystery story in several years—seven, I think—because it had not been able to find any previous manuscripts that met its supposed requirements.

That was a dangerous sort of challenge to make to the critic or even to the habitual reader of mysteries, and I was interested to learn that a New York editor promptly came back with the retort: "They should have waited a little longer."

I am inclined to agree with the critic. I suspect that what attracted the publishers was something that had nothing to do with the intrinsic merit of the mystery. The story, by the way, is called "The X Mystery" (The Viking Press). I must play ball with publisher and author and public and not talk about the actual mystery, but I may say, I think, that although a setting may be interesting and bizarre, it does not make a mystery story.

New Type of Sleuth Produced

In this case the story is built round "Drury Lane," a famous retired actor, who lives in more than Shakespearean splendor in an Elizabethan castle in the suburbs, with portcullis and drawbridge complete, as well as thatched cottages, mullioned windows, hooded fireplaces, and the like. His families are a fat butler named Falstaff and a comic musician named Quip—or words to that effect—who make the old actor up to look like Bernard Shaw or Rudy Vallee, or what have you?

The old actor is strong on the philosophy of acting and the drama, and he discusses urbanely and at length on how an actor, accustomed to playing many parts and creating many personalities, ought to know better than anyone else how the people involved in a murder mystery ought to be feeling. Which, as a piece of psychology, strikes me as a little weak. The average run-of-the-mine actor (and I have the actor in my day) would do well if he had any personality of his own, let alone feeling other people's.

Anyway, it's a nice idea, and I suspect it is the nice idea that sold the publishers on the story. For nowadays the detective who is not bizarre is lost in the shuffle. Hordes of eccentric sleuths, public and private, feminine and masculine and even neuter, elbow him from the scene. I suspect that old Drury Lane, with his Elizabethan castle and his manner of playing Hamlet and his philosophy of acting, is a distant cousin of S. S. Van Dine's precious art critic with the special cigarettes and the dropped G's.

I wonder why our American fictional detectives are so much more bizarre than the English breed. Over the years the readers seem fairly well satisfied with Detective-Inpector Simms, stout, stubby, red-faced, and humorous. Slow but sure. Or Col. Gethrby, a retired army man. Or Dr. Thorndyke, a medico of parts like our own picturesque medico-legal expert of Suffolk County. And they seem to do the job quite as effectively as our own musical comedy breed.

Sherlock Holmes Started Vogue

Yet it was an Englishman, I suppose, who made eccentricity the fashion. None other than old Sherlock Holmes, dandy of them all, with his shag tobacco and his viola and morphine hypodermic and revolver practice in the sitting room. Anna Katherine Green, pioneer of American detective story manufacturers (no, I have not forgotten Edgar Allan Poe) was content with a plain red-faced professional detective named Mr. Grice—or was it Gryce? But lately they get weirder and weirder.

Earl Derr Biggers was content with nobody less than a super-astute Hawaiian Chinese, more pleasant than any single person of whom the recent press reports have told us in that benighted island. Heaven knows, Charlie Chan is needed there—and needed badly—until Earl Derr Biggers has the courage to tackle the job.

Of late I seem to remember a lady interior-decorator detective, who got through more violent physical adventure than Philo Vance has ever enjoyed. And my favorite, I think, is a nurse, the fat, red-haired nurse whose hospitals and sick rooms are always places of grisly horror. I forget her name, but she is good.

The point I was getting at, is that the actual mystery in which Drury Lane engages, "The X Mystery," is nothing particularly extra. Following the fashion of so many of the recent stories, as competition gets keener and keener, the solution turns on matters so infinitesimal that no sane human being would ever consider them seriously, and, in addition, the author pretty deliberately cheats you for his main surprise.

Occasionally, I hear an old Sherlock Holmes on the radio or in the collected edition. What strikes me nowadays is how simple and natural and believable and even probable the old Holmes mysteries were. They took place in a world you could trust, where cause and effect actually seemed to have something to do with each other, and where even detectives were not super-human.

Reader Hasn't a Chance Now

But life gets more and more improbable in the modern world of crime. Highly scientific, mathematical, astro-physical and biochemical. A plain crook or an ordinary murderer is almost impossible. Even hyocine is elementary, nowadays, my dear Watson. The least a self-respecting murderer will do is to plug his unsuspecting friend with a drug that kills him when the morning sun plays along his bare head. And no matter how skillful you are with the strychnine what is the use of it all, if some medical busy-body with a spectroscopic can dig up the corpse and calculate from the ends of the hair how long ago the lady was given the fatal dose?

I am rather inclined to believe that the mystery or detective story race has passed its peak. The human invention can't keep up the pace much longer. For about five years now the production has been enormous, the competition unbearable, and the ingenuity necessary to keep ahead of the game nerve-racking. Many of the latest I have read are obviously overplayed their hand. They are too palpably absurd, too ingenious and complicated and scientific and difficult, to make the reading any more a pleasure.

There's no use trying any more to outguess the sleuth. You might as well try to outguess Vannevar Bush's electric calculator over at Technology. You have to be three kinds of scientist, an art critic, a psychologist, a psychic, and a broth of a boy—all rolled into one—to solve the simplest homicide. I should think all our local experts would want to give it up as a bad job and ask to be transferred to the traffic squad. Fortunately, however, the life isn't anywhere nearly so complicated as fiction. So they do manage to get along.

I got all mixed up with Federal business when I carried out into the annual luncheon of the United Federal Business Association at the Boston City Club. They had a dandy menu-program card, with two American flags on it, and a well-meal—everything from fruit cocktails to cigarettes.

The guest of honor at the luncheon was Rear Admiral Thomas A. Craven, U. S. N., chief coordinator, bureau of the budget. He is shown standing at right, as he chats with William F. Harrington, president of the organization.

W. W. Lufkin, past president of the organization, and at present collector of the port, saw right in my lens as I photographed him making a speech at the speakers table.

Vice-President Thomas P. Porter was busy running the program as I strolled along. Mr. Porter and other officials had a busy time planning this program.

A. Leary, member of the executive committee for the program, was usually checking up on the ends of the hair how long ago the lady was given the fatal dose?

MAID ACCUSED BY WEYMOUTH MAN'S WIFE

Counter Charges in Separation Suit Follow Testimony by Children's Nurse

Miss Alice Mosberg, 17, named, "told on" Mrs. E. A. Souther of Weymouth in Probate Court at Dedham today and "told on" the maid.

Testimony for Ewelet Souther, Weymouth contractor, who seeks legal separation and custody of four children, Miss Mosberg testified.

That Miss Souther told her on quite often evenings, and sometimes did not return home at all. That she (the maid) went out with the wife sometimes that she would meet two men and that Mrs. Souther would leave with one of the men, returning later.

That Mrs. Souther told her on was very fond of the old man and once spent a week with him at camp in Plymouth.

That Mrs. Souther was away four days, Miss Mosberg said. "She came home and my husband asked her where she had been. She said in Maine. He said, 'You're lying and sleeping her face, knocking one tooth out.' Mrs. Souther went over and stood by the fireplace and began to cry. She said, 'I know I deserve it.'"

In cross-examination the girl deposed that Souther told her on four times. Mrs. Souther then took her third in her own defense. "I left my husband January 7 and took the name of Evelyn Harrington," she said. "I didn't want him to follow me because he had threatened my life and the children's."

THREE DAYS CHARGED.
"Two nights before I left home he came home drunk. The baby was crying and he picked the baby up and said, 'I would throw this child downstairs.' He got a gun and said he would shoot all the children."

Once he slept in the nurse's room. "I reproached him for it, and said I would send Alice home to her mother. He said it wouldn't make any difference, because he would shoot all the children."

She admitted seeing a Plymouth camp with another man and said that other persons were also present.

Judge Hangs One Month's Sentence on Horse Thief

It never could have happened in the old West, where men were men and horse thieves were common. It is certainly unusual for a man to be accused of stealing a horse and to have been a policeman in these trying times of speeding automobiles.

But that's exactly the charge on which John Saca of Charler at North End, was found guilty in municipal court today. Instead of being hanged he was sentenced to one month, and appealed.

The story was somewhat complicated, but Judge Adow presided over the right and wrong. Saca had in his possession a horse which he had stolen at the stable of Paul Andoline in Port at North End. After standing a bill of $200 he turned the horse over to Andoline in payment. Later John had the horse from Paul for $100. All went well for a week when John and the horse disappeared.

KIRBY IN PLEA FOR BAN ON U. S. FOES

Elected for the Third Time, He Spurs Catholic Order to Quell Public Enemies

War has been the Knight of Columbus' "Godless agencies" which have "taken the seeds of social unrest in the midst of hunger and want," was declared today by Joseph M. Kirby of Belmont, following his unanimous election to head the Knights in Massachusetts for the third successive term.

Speaking at the annual convention of Massachusetts state Council in the Hotel Somerset the second head asserted: "We propose to hammer from our borders the defaming order, the whispering campaign, the character defamer and the wielder of the poison pen."

REVOLT PLAN FALTED.
In the midst of hunger and want, public agencies have taken the seeds of social unrest. Resolution is proclaimed in many quarters with overthrow of established government and subversion of present moral standards. It is openly proclaimed in many quarters with overthrow of established government and subversion of present moral standards.

"Thus far our people have possessed themselves with honest patience, but unless heeded, continuing now this to lead to happier conditions, no man can forecast the outcome, save in terms of horror and bloodshed. It is within our power as patriotic Catholics, to lead America out of her quagmire of fear and uncertainty, and to conquer the enemies who threaten the peace of the world."

At the convention Joseph H. Martin of Taunton was elected secretary; Thomas F. McGrath of Newburyport, treasurer; James J. Harty of Chelsea, advocate; and Andrew J. Leach of Brookfield, reporter.

TOBACCO AND TONIC TAXES SCORED AS PERIL TO BUSINESS

DEALERS SEEN DRIVEN FROM STATE

Long Only Advocate of Levy Heard at the Session on New Assessment Bill

Overwhelming opposition was voiced today in a crowded State House hearing, to the bill that would put a state tax on tobacco and tobacco products, beverages and admissions to entertainments.

Such a tax, it was warned, would lead to "cigarette bootlegging" and "cigarrette bootlegging" and would result in beverage plants now operating dangerously close to the "red line" removing to other states.

Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long was the sole speaker favoring the measure in Gardner Auditorium, which was thronged with 700 listeners.

Rhodon Wardwell, representing 20,000 wholesale tobacco dealers warned of "cigarette bootlegging" to come if the bill were passed, and he warned also that small order houses would get all the Massachusetts tobacco trade that did not cross the line into some other State to buy its amuse.

NEED BUSINESS INJURY

Many small retailers Wardwell predicted, would be forced to go out of business.

Judge William J. Day of South Boston Court, representing beverage interests, told the legislative committee on taxation that 20 other states have already thrown out such "monstrous taxes."

Ninety per cent of the beverage industry in Massachusetts, he said, was already on the "red line" and in one year, even without being taxed, ten per cent of the industry in this state had been given up.

More than a score of other speakers, including a number of legislators, appeared against the proposed taxes and placed various strong organizations on record as opposed.

LONG FAVORS TAX

Tax Commissioner Long, in speaking in favor, said that only 6 per cent of the people in Massachusetts pay an income tax and only 15 per cent pay a real estate tax.

"The Commonwealth can no longer continue with only 11 per cent of its population bearing the burden of the cost of government," Long told the committee. "It costs Massachusetts a little less than $100,000,000 annually to operate and we are facing a per capita cost of government, amounting to something a little less than $100 for every man, woman and child."

"We are facing an annual increase in municipal cost of government. Now it is time to argue that there should be a reduction in government. The point is that it is there and we've got to do something about it."

"These 11 per cent of the people really represent 85 per cent of the total cost of government, whose three big items are education, roads and bridges and the expenses of public welfare, which in these times of unemployment has increased in total terrifically."

In South Carolina, Long said, a tax on beverages has brought the State approximately $2,000,000 in three years.

HOUSE REFUSES TAX RELIEF

An attempt to afford even slight relief to taxpayers failed in the House today when it rejected, 24 to 84, a proposal to eliminate the 35-cent demand for payment of the $1 head tax for old age assistance.

Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester attempted to amend the bill to extend the $1 tax for one more year, his amendment failing for the elimination of the 35-cent demand in cases where the tax is billed together with the poll tax.

At present the law allows billing of a 35-cent demand for both the poll tax and the head tax.

The North Rhode beauty came into court with her father, announced her in the same court, as counsel but Judge Revere found her guilty on the parking charge and ordered her to pay $2 costs.

Vital statistics reports received by the Secretary of State Cook from the cities and towns of the state reveal the number of births for 1931 as the lowest in 32 years.

The number for 1931, 7,945, is a decrease of 350, compared with the year 1930.

Comparisons also disclose that the rate has been falling off steadily since 1924. That year there were 8,463 reported.

NEW PLAYERS WILL HELP LOCALS

By JOE CASHMAN
The Red Sox needn't give up hope of bettering their 1931 showing merely because they have won only four of their first 20 games.

Why? We don't know, but we have dug through the muddy files of a year back and discovered plenty of cause for the Collinsins to hold their heads up. Keep battling and entertaining visions of finishing the race with a better score than the 62 victories and 90 defeats we'll be able to name in six months' time.

It's not much, but it's the current campaign. In April they won only three games, the same number they endured last month. In May, they won 11 and lost 11 and were in last place when the month ended. They lost the next month with the same mark but spitting even in the next 20 games and if they can come close to that in June, they should have a chance at the banner.

Even the recent eight game losing streak is nothing for the Fenians was flack to become unduly disturbed over. Last season it dropped as many decisions in a row twice.

The Sox posted a minor last season and in A. and were July 1910, the, won only 12 out of 43 games. And a just, when they had a mark of 11 victories and 11 defeats. They did most of their playing in September.

So, you see, there is still plenty of work for the club to straighten itself out and attain new heights this year.

Backy Hargreave, able manager of the Detroit Tigers, who open a two-game series at the Fens this afternoon, rates the Sox much stronger than their present record indicates.

Harris Thinks Sox Will Cause Trouble

"Collins acquired three good hitters in Jolley, Watwood and Tate, and has several fine pitchers and better than average infielders and outfielders," declares the visiting pilot.

"I can't see anything his troubles getting started but before long it will settle down and cause plenty of trouble, unless I'm greatly mistaken."

Bucky doesn't believe, though, that the Sox will be able to beat out the club this year either in the season series or in the standing.

One of the objects of the present campaign is to elect a majority of the members of the Board of Education to the Democratic party. The committee, "will be to help the people to make the most intelligent choice of their representatives to the present day governing body."

They have had little actual experience in club racing and teaching."

Under present plans, clinics will be established in New York, Chicago, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, San Jose, East, Mid West and South and in California for California for the Fall and Winter seasons.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, May 10.—(Press.)—The market opened on a note of caution, but was buoyed up after early business on the New York Stock Exchange to note. Trading continued to manifest itself in light volume.

Another upturn in U. S. Government bonds, diminished pressure against the dollar in the foreign exchange market, and a less gloomy report of weekly freight car loadings than anticipated in some quarters, more than counterbalanced U. S. Steel's unfavorable tonnage report.

U. S. STEEL FRODOUS GROUP

U. S. Steel remained a conspicuously firm group. Food shares were somewhat heavy for a time. Final prices were somewhat under the bid, but many representative leaders closed with moderate net gains, among them being American Telephone, Borden, Coca-Cola, Du Pont, American Can, and United Fruit.

U. S. Steel ended after its untitled tonnage statement appeared, but quickly straggled back to its initial activity in rail. Transactions approximated $200,000.

STEELS TONNAGE DROPS

U. S. Steel's drop of 18,487 tons in its unfilled orders during April to a new low since its monthly tonnage have been taken into account, was worse than expected in most quarters, but the slackness in the steel industry apparently has not been well discounted.

Endings of revenue freight in the week ended April 30 were off only 585 tons from the previous week. This showing did not have a particularly unfavorable influence on sentiment, in view of the industry's estimates.

Considerable interest was manifested in financial circles in the conference of the industry, particularly the International Conference of leading producers which is expected to get underway this week.

R. K. Keeler, managing director of the Royal Dutch Shell Group, recently visiting in New York, seemed to take a somewhat favorable view of the oil market for the conference today, but avoided predictions.

Statement of the head of the Russian delegation, that the Soviet Government is endeavoring to cooperate to improve conditions was also favorable.

It was also noted that Atlantic Refining Co. ordered 25 cents of the regular dividend of 25 cents.

Rutland Preferred Dividend Is Off

New York, May 10 (AP)—Directors of Rutland Railroad Co. at their meeting today decided to cut the 7 per cent cumulative preferred dividend of $2 a share to $1.50.

The company is in arrears on preferred dividends to the amount of about $333 a share, and the directors of the company have decided to pay the arrears in full.

The directors also have decided to pay the arrears in full, and to pay the arrears in full, and to pay the arrears in full.

Majority Florida Bonds Deposited

New York, May 10.—Protective committee representing holders of general and improvement bonds in the city of West Palm Beach, Fla., announced that more than 90 per cent of the aggregate amount of bonds deposited with the committee has been deposited.

The committee has been organized to assist in the refinancing plan recently made public by the city, and to assist in the refinancing plan recently made public by the city.

Hardware Business Shows Some Gain

New York, May 10.—Business came through its April lull with a noticeable gain in volume, although the monthly stocks were not very heavy.

Without doubt the strongest bulwark has been the improved condition in business and finance. The tested sturdiness of this backing has apparently inspired renewed courage to the hardware industry as well as to the general business structure.

Crosley Radio Has Net Loss in 1931

New York, May 10.—Crosley Radio Co. and subsidiaries for the year ended March 31, 1932, reported a net loss of $139,000 after depreciation and provisions for contingencies and uncompleted purchases order, as against a net loss of $917,848 in the preceding year.

Net loss for the quarter ended March 31, 1932, was $471,000, as against a net loss of $471,000 in the preceding quarter.

Best's Dividend Payment Limited

New York, May 10 (AP)—Quarterly dividend of 30 cents on Best & Co. stock, due at this time, has been omitted. A statement issued by the company today announced that the company had a substantial shrinkage in sales last year, but that the profit was made in the first quarter of the year.
